A company has a Microsoft SQL Server environment that has multiple databases. A database named DB1 has multiple online file groups. It is configured to use the full recovery model. A full backup is performed nightly and transaction logs are performed on the hour. A large number of records are accidentally deleted at 17:20.

You need to perform a point-in-time recovery. Which option should you use first?

- C. SQL Server Managed Backup to Azure
- D. SQL Server backup to URL
- E. file snapshot backup
- F. tail-log backup
- G. mirrored backup media sets
- H. back up and truncate the transaction log

Answer: F

Explanation:

Explanation

To back up the tail of the log (that is, the active log), check Back up the tail of the log, and leave database in the restoring state.

A tail-log backup is taken after a failure to back up the tail of the log in order to prevent work loss. Back up the active log (a tail-log backup) both after a failure, before beginning to restore the database, or when failing over to a secondary database. Selecting this option is equivalent to specifying the NORECOVERY option in the BACKUP LOG statement of Transact-SQL.
